FRIDAY, APRIL 3, 1868.

The ground war was a battle of the day, but the sectional issues that had led up to it remained.

The sentence you have chosen to think that this summer we must have a long war, because the weather and the political parties are not favorable to peace, is a common one.

The time is ripe for a new initiative in the political arena. The railroads and the telegraph lines have brought the people of the South together in a way.

The business community and the laboring classes have grown in numbers and in power. The leaders of the various parties have been at work for several months, and the results of their efforts will be known soon.
