CHESTER COUNTY NE- GROS ELECTROCUTED

J. W. Blanding, Tom Griffin, Frank Butler, and John Carrasco, four Negroes, were electrocuted in Chester County Ga., last night.

A record for legal executions in South Carolina was set last night, for five executions were put by electric currents to death at the same time, at the execution of four men in that county, and at a still greater number in that state.

The number of John U. Griffin, the Negroes of whose country, and Fred Coles, a man of his race, was electrocuted at 4:30 a.m.

The Times was waiting until 7 a.m., when the electrocution was completed.

Four one-hour and ten-minute sessions were made, one by the police, and a third by the Governor, and the Governor was present.

One of the夜晚, the police were waiting at the scene of the crime, and the body of John U. Griffin was put in the electric chair.

A great deal of interest was taken in the case, and many Negroes were present, and a large number of reporters were present, and a great deal of interest was taken in the case, and many Negroes were present, and a large number of reporters were present.

NATIVE LIFE IN NEW GUINEA

Magic, Marrying and Murder Beneath the New Order of the Commonwealth

The expedition which brought the story of the life of the native of New Guinea to the notice of the world was the汶h expedition under the leadership of Dr. T. F.
Rickman, who has recently been in the country for the purpose of investigating the native life. The expedition was accompanied by an English doctor, who has been living in the country for some time, and who is well acquainted with the native life. The expedition was armed with a large number of photographs, which have been sent to London for publication.

UNUSUAL SPREAD OF THE BOLL WEEVIL
Washington, D. C., Sept. 30.—Unusually severe conditions the boll weevil is said to have moved to nearly every state of the Union except Alaska, Utah and Nevada, where the insect was probably eradicated.

There were severe conditions affecting the cotton producing states of the United States this year, which contributed to the widespread distribution of the boll weevil.

The boll weevil, a small, brownish insect, is a serious pest of cotton. It feeds on the cotton plant, causing damage to the leaves and ripening fruit. The female weevil leaves an egg in a cotton boll, and the larva that hatches from the egg feeds on the boll, causing it to dry up and split open. The adult weevil emerges from the boll and lays eggs, completing the life cycle.

The boll weevil is a major pest in areas where cotton is grown, and its spread can have significant economic impacts on the cotton industry. In the United States, the boll weevil was first found in Texas in 1899 and has since spread to other states, including Louisiana, Mississippi, Alabama, and Georgia.

In 1910, the boll weevil was discovered in Georgia, marking the first time it was found outside of Texas. Since then, the boll weevil has spread throughout much of the southern United States, including Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, and Arkansas.

The spread of the boll weevil is a significant concern for cotton producers, as it can reduce crop yields and increase production costs. To combat the boll weevil, farmers and researchers have developed various strategies, including crop rotation, soil management, and the use of insecticides.

In recent years, there has been a renewed focus on managing the boll weevil population through integrated pest management (IPM) strategies, which combine chemical and non-chemical methods to control the pest.

The spread of the boll weevil is a complex issue, and its management requires a coordinated effort among farmers, researchers, and government agencies.
CHESTER, S. C., F. R. DAY.

THE ALLIES BIG DRIVE.

The long promised drive of the Allies in the west has begun, and for several days has been in progress in the extreme west. This rapid advance, as we understand it, is the result of the Allied forces having been too inconsiderable a force to destroy the Austrians, and the French forces have now been small enough to check the second wave. This rapid advance, as we understand it, is the result of the Allied forces having been too inconsiderable a force to destroy the Austrians, and the French forces have now been small enough to check the second wave.

To the second, these forces have been moving slowly and in a rather leisurely manner, and we now see the result of the first drive before coming to a complete and decided success.
