U. S. DESTROYER IN BATTLE WITH GERMAN U-BOAT

WASHINGTON, April 17th—The United States destroyer Smith was in pursuit of a German sub off the American coast yesterday morning. The destroyer was under the command of Captain Van Zandt. The Germans fired a salvo of torpedoes but the American vessel was not hit. The Smith caught the sub and the battle continued for several hours. The Smith eventually sank the U-boat. The Smith was then Worth taking part in another battle with a German submarine off the coast. The Smith lost 2 men in the battle and was badly damaged.

"Quality First"
It is rather surprising how often we carry around with us day after day grievances of various sorts. We would probably resent the accusation that we possessed a revengeful spirit and would indignantly deny that we planned to wreak vengeance upon anyone for any reason whatsoever. Still, honesty will not permit many persons to deny the fact that deep down in their hearts there sometimes lingers a wish to "get even" with someone for some or fancied offense. It is rather tiresome carrying such a grouch about with us all the time, permitting it to project itself into our plans and thereby shadowing their possible influence in different ways in our daily life. Nothing seems worthwhile when we make it a practice to keep forever in the "back of our minds" an irritation that we think adds, say, and more than all making us ring out of the pattern of our living.
