Chicles in a Tooth.

Two new judges at the bench of the United States Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit, both of whom are natives of the state of Texas, have been appointed by President Truman. The appointments were made in response to the recommendation of the Senate Judiciary Committee, which had recommended the selection of two new judges to fill vacancies on the court.

The new judges are Judge J. Frank weir, a former member of the Texas Supreme Court, and Judge John B. Biggers, a former judge of the United States District Court for the Western District of Texas. Both judges are well respected in their respective fields and are expected to make valuable contributions to the workings of the court.

Chicles in a Tooth.

The new judges will take their seats on the bench at the beginning of the new term, which is scheduled to start in the fall. The appointments bring the total number of judges on the court to 11, the same number as before the new appointments.
