The greatest surprise of the occasion was the result of the motion to elect Senator McSweeney would be elected President, but D. S. Henderson, of Aiken, was elected by acclamation. The vote was made unanimous as a unit, according to the scheme that will be adopted.

The unification of the Philadelphia delegates, where a protest for the beach town of the motion was made, is as follows: Leroy Springs, of Lancaster, A. M. Aiken, of Chester, and D. L. Stevenson, of Fairfield, was about 73 years old, and as a Democrat who is ready to bolt the party. He was born near McConnellsville on August 16, 1817, and was nearly 80 at the time of his death. He was an able lawyer and politician, and filled the position of his party's leader with ability.
