Corday Government in Agitation over Rights of Minor Children

Washington, Nov. 15.—Mrs. John N. Williams, U. S. minister to the United Kingdom, has been in London since Thursday, carrying on negotiations with Lord Grey and other prominent men in Great Britain.

A new report reaches this city to the effect that Mr. Roosevelt, who is at present in Paris, is going to take no active part in the negotiations which are now going on between the United States and the United Kingdom.

The Executive said today that it was not desirable to enter into any discussion of the matter until the negotiations had been completed.

The matter is one of great importance to the United States, and the President is anxious to see the negotiations carried through promptly and satisfactorily.

The President's statement that he was not prepared to enter into any discussions of the matter until the negotiations had been completed was made in answer to a question from a member of the Senate.

The President said that he was not prepared to enter into any discussions of the matter until the negotiations had been completed, and that he was at present occupied with other matters.

The President's statement was made in answer to a question from a member of the Senate, who asked whether the President was prepared to enter into any discussions of the matter until the negotiations had been completed.

VICKS
Mr. Sandman Comes Home When You Drive Away Jack Frost

The clouds are moving from the east to the west, filling the sky with a soft, ethereal light as the sun sets over the horizon. The air is crisp and cool, and the gentle breeze carries the scent of freshly cut grass. It's a beautiful day outside, and the perfect opportunity for a leisurely drive down memory lane.

As you drive down the familiar streets, you can't help but notice the changes in the landscape. The once bustling city is now a quiet, peaceful town. The lights on the street corners are still glowing, but they no longer cast a harsh, artificial light over the night sky. Instead, the stars shine bright and clear, and the moon casts a gentle glow over the entire scene.

You pass by old friends, places you used to visit often. Some of them are still the same, while others have changed over the years. You can't help but smile as you drive past the old diner where you used to go on Friday nights with your friends, or the park where you used to take your kids on sunny weekends.

As you continue to drive, you notice the old church on the corner, still standing tall and proud. You can't help but think about all the memories you have in this place, the good times and the bad. But now, it's all just a memory, a distant past.

As you drive further, you pass by the old电影院 where you used to see the latest movies, and the old bookstore where you used to spend hours lost in a world of imagination. You can't help but wonder what happened to all the people you used to know, the ones who were once just like you.

As you drive down Main Street, you see the familiar shops and restaurants that you used to visit all the time. Some of them are still there, while others have closed down, replaced by new ones. You can't help but feel a sense of nostalgia as you drive past these old landmarks.

As you reach your destination, you park your car and step out, feeling a sense of pride and accomplishment. You've come home, and you're never going to leave again.

The sun is setting, casting a warm, golden glow over the entire scene. The stars in the sky are twinkling, and the wind is whispering through the trees. It's a beautiful night, and you can't help but feel a sense of peace and contentment.

You look around, taking in the beauty of this place, the one that you call home. You know that you'll be back again, for as long as you live, and you'll always be welcomed with open arms.

This is your home, your haven, and you'll always be welcome here.

End of the story.

PROBLEMS OF MUNICIPALITIES

City League and Societies in
Meet at Dayton.

To Discuss Civic Matters.

In Mid-November at Dayton, Dr. Brog- iingham Organizations, the City League of Ominopolises was started by John Foster in 1902, to encourage the development of city governments. The City League is a voluntary association of city governments, and its purpose is to promote the welfare of cities and to assist them in their efforts to improve their communities.

The City League of Ominopolises is one of the largest and most influential civic organizations in the country. It has over 700 members, including cities of all sizes and from all parts of the United States. The City League's purpose is to provide a forum for the exchange of ideas and information about city government, to promote the welfare of cities, and to encourage the improvement of city government.

The City League's main activities include the publication of a monthly magazine, the Association of City Managers, the City Council of Managers, and the City League of City Development.

One of the City League's main purposes is to promote the welfare of cities. The City League works to improve city government and to promote the welfare of city residents. It does this by promoting the improvement of city government, by providing a forum for the exchange of ideas and information about city government, and by supporting the development of city government.

The City League's annual meeting is one of the most important events of the year. The meeting is a forum for the exchange of ideas and information about city government, and it provides an opportunity for city officials to meet and discuss the latest developments in city government.

The City League is a voluntary association of city governments, and its members are committed to improving the lives of city residents. The City League's work is important, and it is a key player in the development of city government.
