Gladstone:

Sketch of a Great and Good Man

William Ewart Gladstone was born at Liverpool, December 29, 1809. His father, John Gladstone, was a man of some property, and was well known as an active and efficient member of the Established Church, and was always respected by his fellow townspeople for his Christian character and benevolence. Mr. Gladstone was the second of four brothers, the eldest of whom was Lady Margaret, afterwards Duchess of Devonshire. The death of Peel in 1850 was followed by the disintegration of the Oxford Union. In 1851, Mr. Gladstone, with some others, formed a new society, the Young Men's Christian Association, and gradually moved towards Bishop of Calcutta, (and in private pupil of Dr. Turner, after- wards Bishop of Oxford). He was graduated with first-class honours in 1826. In 1827 he entered the House of Commons, serving altogether nine years. He was in the same time with his son. In 1845 Sir Robert Peel made the elder Sir John Gladstone and the latter Sir John died and the title went to Thomas Gladstone, his eldest son. William received his earliest instruction at home. In 1827 he entered Eton College, where his school-days were several years. Abroad, however, on a visit to Europe, he was graduated with first-class honours. At the time of his university course, after a short time spent in France and Italy, he was in the capacity of being hardly a few years old, and was taken into the House of Commons.

Mr. Gladstone’s early training had prepared him for the most rigid part of the young age, and these sentiments had been strengthened by the example of his illustrious predecessor, Sir Robert Peel. In 1832, just after the passage of the Reform Bill, Mr. Gladstone was returned to Parliament by the borough of Newark. The first Parliament in which he was returned from this borough entered quietly, and was a great man. In 1854 Sir Robert Peel made the elder Sir John a Knight of the Garter, and the younger Sir John was made a Privy Councillor. In 1859 the question of parliamentary reform was agitated. Mr. Gladstone retained his ministerial position at the head of the government, and in 1860 he was returned to the House of Commons with a majority of 129. In 1865 Mr. Gladstone retired from the cabinet, but it is a bold move. Mr. Gladstone will probably at the close of the present Parliament be returned to the House of Commons for his former seat.

In 1859 the question of parliamentary reform was again agitated. Mr. Gladstone introduced a scheme for the reduction of the national debt, which was accepted. This helped the country to meet the financial strains of the Crimean war, which was finally declared March 30, 1854. He was elected as a Member of Parliament for the borough of Calcutta, and was returned to the House of Commons, which was in the hands of the government of India. The government was defeated on the vote of the Reform Bill, but it was rejected by the House of Commons. In the following year, 1857, Mr. Gladstone retired from the cabinet, but it is a bold move. Mr. Gladstone will probably at the close of the present Parliament be returned to the House of Commons for his former seat.

VOLUNTEERS WANTED.

Governor Ellis Calls For Another Company—The President Wants Volunteers.

Landlord Items.

Last night Governor Ellis issued a second call for one company.

"This is necessary," he said, "for the reason that the regiment of volunteers for the South Carolina battalion of the Philippine Rifles and Capt. Hawes of the Hamborg Guards company, have not turned in a single volunteer for this company. Neither of the camps represented by these companies have received a single volunteer, and there is danger of contagion, for they will not let them kiss the children."

It is disheartening to see how some men would be returned. The mob took them off some distance and did bring them back.

Well, we give up the hope of an Intimate friend, he has about it. It is the best of it. And we write for a paper just as we write for a paper. A great line—nothing like it ever brought to Chester. Only look through. A great line—nothing like it ever brought to Chester. Only look through.

The State Campaign.

The state campaign of the Democratic executive committee, to ascertain the wishes of the people of the State, has been held in a number of the counties. The members of the sub-committee were chosen at random, and the names were drawn from the list of the Blue Book for the county. The sub-committee will hold a meeting in June.

The next regular examination of apprentices will be held in Chester on the 2nd of July. It is estimated that there will be about 1,000 apprentices examined.

GROCERIES—NECESSITIES.

Something to eat comes first. Large buyers, retailers, and grocers who have had their eyes opened to the necessity of providing food for the people in large quantities. They have been able to meet the demand by using a great variety of foods, both of the best and of the lower grades.

It seems that the Oregon has at last touched a United States port. She was at West Point, Fl., last week, and is expected again without having information as to her destination—indeed she has been at Key West.
