which ii'worth all it will cost in blo'od and treasure.

As we face conditions and see ourselves in this world amid with war and witness the Nations' engaged in death struggle with each other, let us be fully confident that God, though invisible, is above and behind it all, that His providence is ruling and that in His faith, there are three postulates which cannot be refused.

First, God makes no compromise with sin. Let us not forget America's jingoism.

Richard Farmer, the British author who moans, "I know no worse sin than that of my own nation," is the German's "friend.

We notice that a number of educational institutions of America have generally held making charitable and investing out of the interest of the common fund. We like it if, when a man who is not in a position to make a large donation of money, he still wishes to help, he can do it through the idea of saving money.

From long to time hospitals and orphanages have been set up, mainly because a certain amount of money is being raised by the people. These institutions are not only a shelter for the homeless and a benefit to society, but also an investment for the future. The idea is that the money is saved and later used for the benefit of the community.

Many opportunities are being offered to the people of this country to write in the minds of God and man about their responsibilities to the community. We believe in the idea of saving money and investing it wisely.
