ARCHIBALD RUTLEDGE WRITES

ARCHIBALD RUTLEDGE WRITES IN ADMIRATION OF WINTHROP COLLEGE

Famous South Carolina Impressed by Spirit of the College and Quiet Charm of the Campus

The campus of Winthrop College, located in Rock Hill, South Carolina, is a picturesque and serene setting that has captivated many visitors over the years. Known for its brick buildings, lush green lawns, and historic charm, Winthrop College offers a unique educational experience that appeals to students from all walks of life. In this edition of The Johnsonian, Archibald Rutledge, a celebrated writer and educator, shares his impressions of the college, highlighting its spirit and the profound impact it has on students.

In his article, Rutledge reflects on the atmosphere of Winthrop College and the way in which it fosters a sense of community and intellectual growth. He notes the dedication of the faculty and the high standards of academic excellence that have been cultivated at the institution. Rutledge also pays tribute to the role of Winthrop in the development of South Carolina, emphasizing its contributions to the state's cultural and educational heritage.

Rutledge's article serves as a testament to the enduring legacy of Winthrop College, underscoring the college's commitment to fostering a scholarly environment and nurturing the intellectual development of its students. Through his words, readers are invited to appreciate the beauty and significance of Winthrop College as a beacon of knowledge and enlightenment.

In conclusion, Archibald Rutledge's piece in The Johnsonian provides a valuable insight into the spirit and atmosphere of Winthrop College. His description of the campus and its scholarly pursuits highlights the college's role as a vital institution in the education and cultural landscape of South Carolina.
TO DR. JOHNSTON.

Thoughts of College Day are always present in our minds, and the thoughts of our President—so greatly missed by us—run constantly through our minds. We long for his return, so that we may have his advice, his counsel, and his presence once more. We want to see him again, and to have him continue to guide us, and for the ideals that he has taught us to be the guiding ideals of our lives. We want to have him as our leader, and as the one to whom we can turn for advice and counsel.

MERRY CHRISTMAS!

against the background of the charitable acts of the past few days. For the moment, the spirit of Christmas carols has been replaced by the strains of the violins floating over the campus on the floating carillon, while several of the choirs and other groups, for whether on the heights or in the valleys, keep on singing the old Christmas songs, with beautiful harmonies in The Tabernacle.

Many of Belo Ridge, mentioning hikes from their homes, will refer to our present year to visit the famous peaks and places, swim in the fresh water, and enjoy the worship and love of Christ which have become the symbol of this Christmas spirit. It is a wonderful time to be a Christian, to know that a concrete expression of the love for the Y.W.C.A. and Student Government to the students from the groups, for whether on the heights or in the valleys, will bring the joy and beauty of the sea and the mountains to the campus each year is the least one group of people on Winthrop campus each year is the most. For Christmas spirit that is not a person, but a feeling which means a feeling of fellowship with the rest. Nothing could be more convenient. The rest. Nothing could be more convenient. The rest. Nothing could be more convenient. The rest. Nothing could be more convenient.

The Christmas Bar of Rock Hill

The Christmas Bar is situated near the campus on the corner of Trade Street and Market Place. It is a very interesting and instructive place to visit during the Christmas season. The atmosphere is perfect for a quiet evening with friends. The bar offers a variety of drinks and appetizers, and the staff is friendly and welcoming.

The Christmas spirit that truly has taken control of the college campus is now in full swing. The Christmas spirit of giving and remembrance will soon be felt in the halls and rooms of our Allen House.

This spirit brings a new sense of purpose to the Winthrop student. The Christmas spirit that is so prevalent on campus today is a reflection of the student's desire to give and to serve others. This spirit is alive and well in our Allen House.

“Oh, Fellers,—

I've got my Christmas check from the Citizens Bank. Dad gave one, an’ Mother and Sue, an’ Uncle Jim. Come over ‘n see what I’m goin’ to buy. Mother says we’ve got to have the lastest Christmas we ever had, an’ we all went in into the next club, you bet!"

Our Christmas Club is more than a Christmas Savings Club. It’s a “Friends-making” club for each club member and for this bank. Every club member is as surely a “customer” of this bank as if he or she had $10,000 deposed here. It places the whole bank at your service.

SAFETY SERVICE

JAMES W. PHILLIPS DRUG COMPANY

Consisting of soap, powder, shampoos, and unguents, all of which qualified for use in hospital service.

The poems were “I Guard the South,” a poem expressing the feeling of a Southerner; “Poor,” expressing the suffering of the poor; “Mountain Boys,” a poem about the mountains; and “Battles of the South.”

Mr. Rutledge prefaced a group of war poems with the statement that he wanted to show that if not for some time, he had a heart still. He quoted the war poems that had been written ever since 1861, and he said that this was the only thing he knew how to do. Though for some time he has been a resident of North Carolina, he had not written a war poem until now. He said that he knew the war well and that he had lived through it with the sure and definite touch of the artist. He felt that he had to do it. The poems were “I Guard the South,” a poem expressing the feeling of a Southerner; “Poor,” expressing the suffering of the poor; “Mountain Boys,” a poem about the mountains; and “Battles of the South.”

The organization of a chapter was also discussed. Mr. Rutledge said:
