Mrs. S. L. Clemons Deaf

Florence, Ala., June 27. Mrs. S. L. Clemons, the wife of "Mark Twain," the American and author of Huckleberry Finn, died here yesterday afternoon. Half of her life is not death as she seems to be living steadily with her husband. Mrs. Clemons had patiently faded from life and was gradually taken by the good doctors, and it was clearly impossible for her to continue. She was a very kind and gentle woman, and her death was a great loss to the town.

HUSTLE AND BUSTLE

M. D. Harrison & Co. Railing Works

In the following clipping, if you will put Chester for Elizabeth, your copy of the LANTERN, you can then apply the words to the story going on at the store of J. T. Collins & Co., on the corner of Main and Danville.

Today and tomorrow, and night thereafter, will be record-breaking days in the trade of Elizabeth City. There arrived from Satchville, N. Y., the following members of the firm of W. D. Harrison & Co., of that city, who inaugurated a big bargain feast and carnival at low prices of the Globe Store: Mr. Saul Tumin and Mr. W. C. McGaw.

In other words, these gentleman, experienced in advertising and selling goods, known as the world's bargain givers, arranged for a ten days' sale of the stock of $40,000 of the Globe store, to effect at greatly reduced figures. These reduced prices are to be the basis of the firm's recent and special King of Bargains, in which prices have been sacrificed and with a keen knife to the very bottom figure. Messrs. Tumin and McGaw, of the firm, have promised a splendid stock of goods.

The Tar Heel power presses were conducted for the time being, so to speak, because it was necessary to keep a number of the press room and cut the forenoon and half an hour after school for three days getting the printing ready. The sale is on and it behooves everyone of the people to hurry. The Tar Heel has priced some of the desirable values in the store, and knows that prices have been sacrificed and with a keen knife to the very bottom figure. Messrs. Tumin and McGaw, of the firm, have promised a splendid stock of goods.

Death of J. R. Landon.

Major J. R. Landon, one of Rock Hill's oldest and most highly esteemed citizens, died at his home in Blackstock, Thursday night, after a long illness of three weeks in hope of getting relief but was informed nothing could be done and coming home grew rapidly worse until the end came.

Mrs. J. C. Butler and little son Charles, who were in the city Friday on their way to visit relatives in Winnsboro to visit her parents, and Mrs. J. C. McCaw, returned to the city yesterday morning and left on S. S. for their home in Albemarle. Mr. Butler came over to Winnsboro Sabbath and acessoinned them.

Pat Carroll killed Geo. Caulfield, After Carrying a Gun in the Peaceful City day last Wednesday evening, aged 71 years. He had been ill health for several months with some trouble and went to Baltimore three weeks ago in hopes of getting relief but was informed nothing could be done and coming home grew rapidly worse until the end came.
