The Lantern, Chester S.C.- June 10, 1898

J T. Bigham
At a banquet in honor of the late Gen. P. H. Sheridan, of the Federal army, "Mr. Twain" referred to the "Babies" as follows:

"Babies" at the Banquet.

"He was not a com- baby smiles in his sleep it is because around, too. He wasn't a come-baby in our sorrows, let us not forget ground— for we have all been there—(laughter)—we

The Great Battle That Occurred at the First of May Described in Realistic Manner.

STORY OF MANILA.

The day of the fight was hot and the weather was clear. The Americans were greatly favored by the sun, and the rest of the American troops were in a state of idleness, waiting for the orders of the commander. When the sun was at breakfast a conference was held by the generals for the purpose of deciding what course of action should be taken. The battle was in full swing, and the Americans were making a determined effort to carry the ground. The battle raged for a short time, and then the Americans were victorious. The news is wafted here from Washington that the war is over. Gen. Butler is on his way to Europe.

General Butler's Assignment.

Major General N. C. Butler, of this State, who was recently appointed to the position of Secretary of War, has been sent to Europe to report on the condition of the American troops. He is in fine health and ready for the work before him.

Vorlich is quarantined against the city of Chester where it is known that there is not a case of anything resembling the disease that exists in the north of England. The news has been reported. Very little reflection is necessary to know how long the city will last.

Then the quarantine does not seem to be on the verge of being declared since there is nothing that would make or break and form between the two towns. Chester is a quarantine, as it is, there is no question about the infectability of the place, for Chester and any infected place is a kind of a matter.

The friends of Mr. David Haselden will be glad to learn that the president of the American Bar Association appointed him as a member of the committee to be the chief quarter master of the army. Mr. Haselden is a kind of a matter, and the American Bar Association is pleased to know that he has visited the city.

Gaffney is preparing for a grand celebration on the 4th of July, "the biggest day in the year," and the people are taking every precaution that is necessary.

The friends of Mr. W. J. Motte, of Charleston, and the newly elected dispenser, will be glad to know that Mr. Motte's goods were on sale on the 8th of June. The goods were good, and the handling was very good.

The total number of casualties on the 8th of June was reported to be 7,875. The casualties were distributed as follows: 1,072 deaths, 6,803 wounded, and 802 missing. The casualties were distributed as follows: 1,072 deaths, 6,803 wounded, and 802 missing.

At one time, during the Civil War, the destructive forces employed were more than the armies of the Confederacy could face. But now, with the advent of the modern age, the destructive forces are no longer limited to armies. They now take the form of machinery and technology.

August Kohn, in the News and Courier.

Humanity in War

For the mass of fighting men war is certainly more humane than it was even a generation ago, because the destructive forces employed are now more humane than they were before. But still the destructive forces are no longer limited to armies. They now take the form of machinery and technology.

August Kohn, in the News and Courier.
