AMERICANS AND MEXICANS IN BLOODY CLASH

El Paso, Texas, June 27—A bloody clash between the American and Mexican regiments in Juarez, Mexico, was reported to the press

as follows:

The fighting was caused by a dispute over the distribution of food and ammunition between the two forces. The American Army, commanded by General Ulysses S.

Grant, and the Mexican Army, commanded by General Antonio López de Santa Anna, were engaged in a battle that lasted for several hours.

The American forces were able to withstand the initial attack of the Mexican forces, but were eventually overwhelmed by the superior numbers of the Mexican Army.

The American forces retreated towards

El Paso, while the Mexican forces advanced towards Juarez.

The battle resulted in a significant loss of life on both sides, with estimates of casualties ranging from several hundred to thousands.

The fighting continued for several hours, with both sides inflicting heavy losses on each other.

The battle was a significant event in the War of the Pacific, and had a major impact on the outcome of the war.

claimed Independence of the Arab* from Ottoman rule.

The king or emir, a military leader and political figure, is often associated with the idea of independence from foreign rule. In this context, it refers to a leader who has declared or achieved independence for their people.

PUTTING THE OTHER "FELLOW OUT OF BUSINESS."

In this phrase, "fellow" likely refers to a competitor or someone trying to displace another person from a position or role. "Putting the other "fellow" out of business" suggests removing or eliminating someone else from a market or role, possibly through competition or other means.

The speaker is a competitor or someone interested in leadership in this context. The phrase could be interpreted as aggressive or competitive, indicating a strong desire to achieve a particular position or role.

The man or figure being referred to here could be a political leader, a military commander, or any significant figure in a given context who is looking to gain power or prominence.

The phrase "putting the other "fellow" out of business" could be seen in various contexts, such as politics, business, or military leadership, where the speaker is trying to establish their dominance or achieve a specific position.

Ross W. Tyner, 42, an auto manufacturer from Detroit, was appointed "fellow" this week. He is the auto industry's third "fellow" in recent months.

The speaker or person making the statement seems to be highlighting the role or position of "fellow" in a particular context, possibly referring to auto manufacturing. The appointment of Ross W. Tyner could be significant in this context, as it aligns with the use of the phrase to describe the role of "fellow".

The statement "fellow" is likely a euphemism for a significant position or role in the context of the auto industry. It could refer to a key leader or figure in the industry who is responsible for significant decisions or strategies.

The position of "fellow" is not explicitly defined here, but it is clear that the appointee, Ross W. Tyner, is recognized for their role.

The phrase "fellow" in this context is not typically used in everyday conversation, but it appears to be significant in the context of the auto industry. It could be a term used internally by the industry or in a specific context related to the speaker or the situation.

The speaker is highlighting the importance of Ross W. Tyner's role in the auto industry, possibly suggesting that this appointment is significant or noteworthy.

The statement is part of a larger discussion or report about the auto industry, and the use of "fellow" as a term or title is noteworthy in this context.

The phrase "putting the other "fellow" out of business" suggests competition or rivalry, which is a common theme in discussions about leadership and industry roles.

The speaker or person is highlighted as someone who has secured or is in a position to achieve a significant role, likely by displacing a competitor or another person from that role.

The context here is not fully clear, but it appears to be related to the auto industry or another significant field where leadership roles are competitive.

It Always Helps

Mrs. Sylvia Woods, of Clifton Mills, Ky., in writing of her experience with Cardui, the women's tonic, says, "Before I began to use Cardui, my 'back and leg' would hurt so bad, I thought the pain would kill me; I was hardly able to do any of my housework. After taking three bottles of Cardui, I began to feel a new life in my body. I can now do all my housework, as well as run a big water mill."

"The Speaker:"

The speaker is a person who is addressing the audience, possibly a politician or a public figure. Their speech could be about various topics, such as politics, governance, or important events.

The name "The Speaker" could be a generic term for someone speaking in public, indicating that the speaker is addressing an audience.

The context is not clear from the image, but it appears to be a public address, possibly in a political or governmental setting.

The speaker might be discussing significant issues, making announcements, or providing updates.

The Speaker would be expected to have knowledge or expertise in the topic they are discussing, and their speech could be influential in shaping public opinion or decision-making.

The Dollar that Goes Farthest is The Dollar that Stays At Home

Few people realize how much a dollar can really be stretched when it is kept. You pay your deject to buy his merchandise. Your merchant pays his landlord, he pays his brother. The builder pays his laborer or his service and they pass it to the government, and it is gone.

In this case complicated shows how this has got to the state of the state. Every dollar kept in Chester county and kept in Chester is a dollar that is saved from the government's pocketbook, and this money is a dollar saved from the government's pocketbook.
