Sour Stomach

No reputable line of quack remedies can or will guarantee a cure for every case of sour stomach. Some of the manufacturers of such nostrums will guarantee a cure in cases in which they are used as a regular medication, and that if cases do not clear up they will be returned at the price paid. And yet thousands of cases daily are treated by quack remedies and returned to the manufacturer, because the faith of the patient was not strong enough to believe in the medicine, or because the patient did not eat enough of the remedy to make it effective.

Three years ago, the manufacturer of a well-known cold remedy in Chicago was asked by a South Bend, Ind., post-officer to treat his wife, who had been suffering months with sour stomach. The wife was convinced of the value of the medicine, but her husband was not. He said: "I will try the medicine if you will read the label and I will follow the instructions closely."

The woman followed the directions and in a few days, while her husband was away, the medicine was taken and left on the table. The next morning he was surprised to find that the pain was gone. He read the label and found directions for use. He returned home and gave them to his wife, who was then suffering from the same complaint.

The woman said: "You read the label and follow the directions, I will do the same." The next day the pain was gone and the woman said: "I will do the same, and I will read the label and follow the directions." The man said: "I will do the same, and I will read the label and follow the directions."

The woman said: "I will do the same, and I will read the label and follow the directions."}
