Long Distance Flights. London, June 15—Flying from the trenches in France to London and back again in the same day is becoming an accepted experience for officers of the American Infantry, who recently left the trenches only by coming around the English Channel and landing in an airship; and we in London, just back a few minutes ago from the trenches, can say with truth that the ride is not half as bad as the trip in even shorter time, leaving for the trip at 4:30 a.m. and back again in the same day.
