A MODERN HERO

Oscar Paul Kruger Round by Black

NEW YORK, July 24, 1904.

Oscar Paul Kruger, former President of the Transvaal Republic, and one of the most prominent figures in the history of South Africa, has passed away in his home in South Africa after a long illness, which was in its last and fatal stage.

He had been suffering from the effects of the war against the British, which had resulted in the loss of many of his friends and fellow countrymen.

It was a sad day for South Africa when the news of his death was announced, but it was a day of triumph for the British, who had finally put an end to the conflict that had been going on for so long.

The loss of such a great leader is felt deeply by all who knew him, and his memory will live on for many years to come.

WORK OF A FAKE

A Man's Paper Giver an Interesting Account of a Fake

A man who has given expression to the opinion that one can find the truth and the whole truth by reading the newspaper, has been criticized by some who maintain that the press is biased and unreliable.

The man in question, who is a well-known journalist, believes that the press is the only source of truth and that its reports are always accurate.

He has been accused of being too critical of the government and too supportive of the opposition, but he maintains that his reports are based on fact and that they serve the public interest.

The debate continues, with each side arguing its point of view.

THE LANTERN.
The first auspiciously hospitable place was a great place for tennis. The crowd and the weather were delightful, and it was a great place for tennis. However, it was not necessary to borrow a racket or pen to know that the weather was pleasant. To attach a couple to appear before the people, however, would have been appropriate.

James C. M. Pender, candidate for the office of county attorney, said it was a great privilege to appear before the voters. The people were not misled by his speeches, and he had not been perplexed by labor contracts.

Thomas McCord had been a faithful performer of the duties of the office, and he had been re-elected by a large majority. He had not been voted for the office of county attorney, and he had not been perplexed by labor contracts.

The space was not large enough to accommodate all the people who were present. He had referred to the people present.

Mr. Williams had been elected by a large majority.

A. Clifton White asked that Mr. Williams be re-elected. Mr. H. S. Haid, candidate for the office of county attorney, said it was a great privilege to appear before the voters. The people were not misled by his speeches, and he had not been perplexed by labor contracts.

Mr. Williams had been elected by a large majority.

Mr. J. H. Henry Gladden was glad to announce that the space was not large enough to accommodate all the people who were present. He had referred to the people present.
