Chester, S. C., Sept. 24 - (Special to the Daily Globe). - Wm. Wright has the Confederate Order of the Southern Cross in gold and silver insignia which was won by his great-grandfather, Wm. Wright, in the Civil War.

The order, which is one of the highest military decorations of the Confederate Government, was awarded to Wm. Wright for faithful service during the war. He was a member of Company B, 1st Virginia Volunteer Infantry, and served as a first lieutenant of cavalry.

The order is a gold and silver medallion with the Confederate emblem on one side and the words "Order of the Southern Cross" on the other. It is encased in a blue velvet pocket case with gold trim.

The order was presented to Wm. Wright by the Governor of Virginia, who stated that it was fitting that such an honor should be bestowed on a descendant of a soldier who had so bravely served his country.

Wm. Wright, who is a retired lawyer, is a member of the Sons of Confederate Veterans and the United Daughters of the Confederacy. He is also a member of the United States Army Reserve and has served in the Korean War.

The order was originally presented to Wm. Wright by his great-grandfather, Wm. Wright, in the Civil War.

They sell goods so cheap; they are continually raising the cotton-seed market; they are now building the cotton market; cutting the price on wagons and buggies.

This may all be true, but we cannot see how this will hurt our customers or their customers, and we are not running a hospital for wounded merchants.

We will sell bagging and ties cheaper than any one in Chester. We carry almost everything. We want every buyer to investigate these charges and if true, save money on what you buy. We will guarantee everything as represented or money refunded.

"The adventure of the Dilettante"

The party was seated in the elegant library of the Dilettante, a man of considerable repute in the world of art and culture. Holmes, as always, was engrossed in his pipe, while Dr. Watson looked on with a critical eye.

"Well, Watson," said Holmes, "I think we have a case here that needs some careful investigation."

"A dilettante," exclaimed Watson, "a man who takes art for sport."

"Precisely," said Holmes. "We have received a complaint from a local artist, Mr. St. Clair, who claims that his latest masterpiece, a portrait of a famous musician, has been stolen.

"The art world is shocked," added Watson. "What do you propose to do?"

"I propose to walk into the gallery and confront the suspect," said Holmes. "But first, let us discuss the evidence."

They spent several hours examining the case, discussing the possibilities, and considering the course of action. Finally, they decided to enter the gallery as if they were customers.

"I suppose you think you can read more into the mind of your adversary than I can," said Watson, "but you have always been one of the best detectives I have ever known."

"And I suppose you think you can think for me," retorted Holmes, "but I have always been one of the best detectives you have ever known."
