Plan to Secure Market for Small Quantities of Butter.

For a year or more there has been a continuous demand for small quantities of butter markets. The market for small quantities has been neglected by the large butter manufacturers, and the demand has been met by the small creameries. The reason for this neglect is that the small creameries are not able to compete with the large manufacturers in the sale of large quantities of butter.

The small creameries are unable to compete with the large manufacturers in the sale of large quantities of butter because they do not have the capital to invest in the equipment necessary for the production of large quantities of butter. The equipment necessary for the production of large quantities of butter is expensive and requires a large investment of money.

The small creameries are also unable to compete with the large manufacturers in the sale of large quantities of butter because they do not have the same amount of experience in the production of butter. The large manufacturers have been in the business for a longer time and have more experience than the small creameries.

The small creameries are also unable to compete with the large manufacturers in the sale of large quantities of butter because they do not have the same amount of distribution. The large manufacturers have a larger distribution network than the small creameries.

In order to compete with the large manufacturers in the sale of large quantities of butter, the small creameries will have to invest in the equipment necessary for the production of large quantities of butter, gain more experience in the production of butter, and increase their distribution network.

The small creameries will also have to be willing to accept orders for small quantities of butter at a lower price than the large manufacturers.

The small creameries will also have to be willing to accept orders for small quantities of butter at a lower price than the large manufacturers in order to compete with them in the sale of large quantities of butter.

We urge all small creameries to invest in the equipment necessary for the production of large quantities of butter, gain more experience in the production of butter, increase their distribution network, and be willing to accept orders for small quantities of butter at a lower price than the large manufacturers in order to compete with them in the sale of large quantities of butter.

Death of Senator Johnson.

Eaton, Sept. 12th, Senator W. F. Johnson died at his home here on Saturday night about 1:30 o'clock. Mr. Johnson was stricken with congestion on Wednesday of last week. He had served Aiken County in the state senate for the past six years, being elected to that body in 1905 and again in 1909. Mr. Johnson was an able man and a skilled politician. He had served Aiken county in the state senate for the past six years, being elected to that body in 1905 and again in 1909. He was a hard campaigner and a worthy foe on the stump.

Mr. Johnson was a native of Aiken county. After entering the Baptist ministry some years ago he moved to Barnwell where he served the local Baptist church for a number of years. Later he returned to his home county of Aiken, gave up the ministry and engaged in the practice of law in which he achieved some success.

Mail Carriers not Office-holders.

The attorney general's office holds that the mail carrier is not an office-holder. This will interest a large number of rural carriers and a good proportion of the people. The question came up from Orangeburg, as the following letter will show and the situation as to the carrier appears to be as indicated in the letter.

September 16, 1906.

Mr. Hopkins, Mr. J. M., C. S. Dear Sir: Yours of September 11, stating: 'Like a citizen, who is em ployed by the United States government as a rural mail carrier as a service, should not be taxed.

In an opinion given by Mr. W. H. Thomas, then assistant attor ny general September 29, 1906, (see Act General's report, p. 62) the office held that the position of rural mail-carrier is not an office, but a mere employment, therefore, holding such a position does not disqualify it to be employed by the state school trustee.

Very truly yours,

A. H. Hopkins, C. S. Bay.

The Gospel of Good Liquor.

Two years ago Rev. T. W. Bergeron wrote in this legislature in Charleston on the introduction of the term and was defeated. This year he ran on a non-licensing platform and was elected. He evidently preached the gospel of good liquor to great effect.— Pee Dee Advocate.
