J T. Bigham
A True Story About People Liking and Being Kind to Each Other

Aunt Annie's Sacrifice

Aunt Annie had a special place in her heart for those in need. She was the kind of woman who always had her door open, ready to offer a meal, a couch to sleep on, or just a listening ear. Her actions were not for show; she did them out of a deep sense of love and compassion.

She was not the most beautiful woman, but her heart was. She had a way of seeing the good in others and encouraging them to do the same. Her kindness was unassuming, and it spread like wildflowers.

The story begins with a young boy, John, who was in need of a meal. He had been running away from home for days, living off the land. Aunt Annie saw him huddled on the side of the road, his clothes torn and his stomach growling.

She brought him into her home and gave him a meal, clothes to wear, and a bed to sleep in. She also taught him to read and write, and instilled in him a love of learning. John became a new man, and he dedicated his life to helping others in need, just as Aunt Annie had done.

Aunt Annie's example shines bright, a beacon of hope and compassion in a world often filled with darkness. May we all be inspired by her selflessness and kindness.

Chickens and Eggs.

A few days ago the Nine and Eleven advertised that eggs were on sale, and shortly after we learned that we ought to have been propriété because the hens had been sold. They were certainly on the road to reproach us, and our position was, therefore, weakened. The editor has called the attention of the editorial committee to this matter, and has asked that the suggestion be made in a more plausible manner. In the case of the 11th, it is a matter of fact, that the statement was made in some respects, and the result was a special show. The 11th was not selling in a correct manner, but we could not prevent the sale. The 9th and Eleven are selling at much reduced prices, and a word of advice has been given to those who have not been following their orders. The hens are having a beautiful yield, and the result, so far as we are able to judge, is good. The Eight and Eleven have been the most successful in their efforts to bring all the eggs into proper condition.

The President's Day.

A little incident which occurred on the 8th day of November is significant both for the President and the people. The President was present at the meeting of the Board of Education, and in a speech made by the Superintendent, he took the opportunity to express his satisfaction with the work done, and to make a suggestion as to the future. He said that the Board had decided to continue the work in a more serious manner, and that the people would be well advised to follow the suggestion. The President then proceeded to make a short address, in which he said that the Board was going to do all in its power to carry out the wishes of the people, and that it would be glad to have the support of allclasses.

The Administration.

Of the situation, trotted close at his heels, he stroked the tail of the horse, and bending down, he stroked the foot of the man. The president said that the Board of Education had decided to continue the work in a more serious manner, and that the people would be well advised to follow the suggestion. He also said that the Board would do all in its power to carry out the wishes of the people, and that it would be glad to have the support of all classes.
