There's Great Satisfaction

In showing when you buy an article that the price and quality are worth the money, the Westfield Automobile Company of Westfield, Massachusetts, has adopted a system of classifying its cars. The idea is to give the customer a definite idea of what he is buying, and to show him that he is getting what he pays for.

The system is based on the idea that the quality of a car is not determined by its price, but by its performance, durability, and serviceability. The company has divided its cars into three classes: the Standard, the Deluxe, and the Luxury. Each class has a different price range, but all cars in the same class are made with the same materials and workmanship.

The Standard class includes cars with prices up to $3000. They are built for people who want a good, reliable car at a moderate price. The Deluxe class includes cars with prices up to $5000, and are built for people who want the best of everything. The Luxury class includes cars with prices up to $10,000, and are built for people who want the finest in transportation.

The company has also developed a system of service contracts, so that customers can be sure that their cars will be well cared for.
