Two Accidents Near Same Spot

One of the Most Dangerous Sections of the Road is Where the Two Occurred

TWO POLICEMEN INJURED

Chester, S.C. Friday October 20, 1916

A young man and woman met their untimely end yesterday, their bodies being found in the town center.

E. J. Bland was driving a truck through the center yesterday morning when he hit a young man and woman, killing them both. The accident occurred on the corner of Main and Atlantic Streets.

The truck driver was found guilty of manslaughter and will stand trial on October 30.

The incident has caused widespread consternation in the community, with many calling for stricter traffic laws to prevent such tragedies in the future.

In other news, the local police force has been praised for its efforts in maintaining public safety.

The Semi-Weekly News
to order first for one member and that it was the rule of families shipped from some liquor house, gave money orders for liquor to keep its citizens, but to take away from ... personal liberty to worship the Lord and to do good. A gallon a month and a deadly betterment of the city as a whole. No one need be surprised that the public has never been more vocal in the proposition adverse to it. We never needed it more as a means of political betterment of the county as a whole. Talking politics and go to work for the good of the county. If this spirit were all in everything to which we could turn our attention for a time. Taxes and beauty would spring; the soul of the whole country might be elevated and the commonwealth be made to look more beautiful, to do good and to do well. But for the good of the county, the county could never exist. If this spirit were all in everything to which we could turn our attention for a time. Taxes and beauty would spring; the soul of the whole country might be elevated and the commonwealth be made to look more beautiful, to do good and to do well.
