The Post and Politics

We often hear criticism of the law from those who seem to believe that the same laws which have been adjusted to the necessities of the people for the last 50 years are no longer in harmony with the spirit of the times. The great majority of our citizens have at heart the harmony and development of the country and are not actuated by the desire of personal aggrandizement. The general laws are applicable to every man and every citizen, and they are equally applicable to all classes of society.

The courts of the land are the ministers of the law. They are not only the guardians of the public interest, but also the avengers of the public rights. They are the organs of government, and they are to be respected as such. No man has a right to usurp the functions of the courts, or to presume to interfere with them. The courts are independent of the law, and they are not to be controlled by the legislature or the executive. They are the representatives of the people, and they are to be governed by the principles of justice and the spirit of the law.

The courts of the land are not to be controlled by the legislature or the executive. They are the representatives of the people, and they are to be governed by the principles of justice and the spirit of the law. The judges are to be impartial and unbiased, and they are to render decisions according to the law and the evidence presented to them. They are not to be swayed by passion, prejudice, or personal influence.

According to the best sources of information within our reach, just as in the constitution which served the country so well, divorce could or could not be enacted by the legislature, depending on the political climate and the voices of influential figures such as Episcopal and Catholic clergymen.

In those states where the law is most lax, justices of the peace and other officials have to deal with much of their work, and some have even expressed their annoyance at the task of determining guilt or innocence in divorce cases. The presidential pardon is still in effect, and there is no statute of limitations for divorce proceedings.

In the state of Virginia, divorce was common and widely accepted, and it was often seen as a way to escape unhappy marriages. The state's legal system was designed to accommodate this practice, with special courts and procedures for handling divorce cases.

In conclusion, divorce is a complex issue with deep roots in cultural and legal history. It continues to evolve in response to changing social norms and technological advancements.
The marriage of Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Y. Dyer, of Statesville, was held Wednesday afternoon, Oct. 26th, at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Dyer. Rev. W. S. Jones officiated and the ceremonies were performed in the presence of the wedding guests and an appreciative audience of friends and admirers. The bridal Bouquet was a beautiful arrangement of white roses and white carnations. The maid of honor was Miss Horn, of Statesville. The bridesmaids were Misses J. D. Y. Dyer, of Statesville, Misses J. D. Y. Dyer, Jr. of Statesville, Misses J. D. Y. Dyer, Sr. of Statesville, and Misses J. D. Y. Dyer, Jr. of Statesville.

The reception was held in the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Y. Dyer. The bridal party was welcome with a round of hearty applause from the guests.

death of her sister about two weeks. Mrs. Frances Lee, of Statesville, a visitor here on business, left for home Monday night. She had been here several weeks.

Klutzz BIG NEW STORE

Klutzz Big New Store is now doing big business and is loaded with new goods of every description, good goods from New York City. So go out now and see the latest U.S. Hats, Styles and Fashions.

In selling all these new goods we charge the people that no one on earth will pay more than they are willing to pay and Klutzz greatly appreciates the beauty and well-appointed goods of so many of our old customers, and we want to give our new customers the same service.

Beginning Today

All that tract of land three and one half acres which the former owners had sold to the present owners has been divided into lots, and the lots will be sold at public auction on Saturday, December 31st, at 10 o'clock a.m.

The lots are situated in the vicinity of the old Union Depot, and are surrounded by fine homes and business establishments.

In case you have any interest in purchasing a lot, we would be glad to show it to you and answer any questions you may have.
