THE NEW TREATY.

New York-Paumonte Document Ready for Senate--In London
By Paul W. S. Stebbins
WASHINGTON, D.C., Nov. 18.-The new treaty between Great Britain and the United States, arrived here today at 2 o'clock by Secretary Hay, contains an article from which much may be inferred as to the position of the British ambassador in the event of the treaty being ratified.

The treaty was signed by Secretary Hay, October 20th, and the British plenipotentiary, Mr. Lord John Minto, October 21st. The act of ratification was declared by the British government on the 11th of November last, followed by the signature of the treaty by the British plenipotentiary. The treaty was then referred to a joint committee of both nations for the purpose of framing a general arbitration treaty, to be submitted to the Senate and the House of Commons for ratification.

The treaty is intended to replace the first Paumonte treaty, which was signed in 1818, and was extended by the London treaty of 1824. It is a general agreement to the effect that in case of a dispute between the two nations, the United States shall have the exclusive right of arbitration, and that the British government shall have the exclusive right of arbitration in cases involving the rights of neutrals in the United States.

The law is intended to extend the British government's control over the American merchant ships in the United States, and to prevent the American government from interfering with the British merchant ships. It also provides for the establishment of a joint committee of both nations for the purpose of framing a general arbitration treaty, to be submitted to the Senate and the House of Commons for ratification.

The treaty is said to be the most important agreement arrived at between the two nations, and to be the most important step taken toward the establishment of a general system of arbitration in international disputes.

THE LAW ELASTIC.

You Can Stretch it, Squash it, Blow it up, or Compress it.

We are not too familiar with all the provisions and advantages of the new law, but it appears to be a great step in the right direction. It seems to be a little too elastic, however, and it may not be easy to understand. But it is generally agreed that the law is a great step forward in the right direction.

THE MAKING OF THE LAW.

The law was first introduced by Dr. Kings New Life Pills, and it was passed by the United States Congress in the summer of 1870. The law was designed to prevent the making of false statements about the effects of medicine.

They would be as bad as the old road, and these places could be made.

When good roads were being the concern of people two years ago, the offer was made by men who were in the business of boring and piercing the earth, to sink the necessary piles and the road would be ready for the wheels of the carriage, but quite soon after this, there was a movement to consider the public interest, and not only would not gladly give the right of way, he would resist and plot and any means to the contrary.
