LEBANON EARTHQUAKE

A Brief Account of One of the Greatest Earthquakes inRecent Years

The town was covered in dust and ashes, the buildings were in ruins, and the streets were filled with debris. The whole city was in shambles, with the homes of the nobility and mansions destroyed, and the palaces of the inquisition and the royal halls barely intact. The remains of the city were piled on top of one another, with the corpses of the dead mixed in with the rubble. The streets were clogged with debris, and the air was thick with smoke and dust. The entire city was in shambles, and the inhabitants were left to pick up the pieces.
The Quo Vadis company did not play at York yesterday, but we expect to see a bigger house there than usual, as the prices were placed at two high figures, and our critics say that the audience was the smallest of the house, though quite steady. The Yeoman's explanation is that the prices were so high that few people of the middle class could afford to pay. The Yeoman company played in Chester last night, and the smallness of the house there was quite noticeable. The Yeoman's explanation is that the tickets were so expensive that very few people of the middle class could afford to pay. On the first page of this issue a communication from Mr. I. S. Boney, in which he criticizes THE LANTERN and our correspondent, the News and Courier, in regard to the mercantile struggle in which the Advocate is engaged in Yorkville. The communication may be read in THE LANTERN.

Mr. Boney has made a great many mistakes in his copy, and the point of the paragraph is lost. He has used the words "the" and "of" in a singular sense, which he should not have used. There are a thousand articles I cannot name in this space, but close prices will prevail on all Hardware, Stores, Timers, and many goods. We have made arrange-ments with expert buyers of general merchandise north and west to bring these goods to Chester at as low as the Red Racket can sell them. In the big battle of glory it is the courage, the spirit and gentlemanly that wins. In the mercantile struggle it is the Big Value, the backbone and the ready cash, this is the story that is being told down in oil. We want every body to visit the Red Racket Stage between New and Christmas.

Business Locals—A request has been made to put up a post, to act as a telephone support, and a letter has been received from a local stockholder, expressing the wish that the company might be interested in the property.

Temple.—Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Lawrence were on a business trip to New York.

The Home of Mr. and Mrs. C. J. McFarland, on West End, was the scene of a wedding on Thursday evening. The bride, Miss Louise, and Mr. J. H. Robertson, the bridegroom, exchanged vows before a Judge of the Supreme Court, and the ceremony was performed by Rev. C. H. Batchellor of the Baptist church, after which the newly married couple made their way to Washington D.C., in honor of the bride's father, who is the President of the University of the District of Columbia.

The hotel was well filled, and a good time was had by all. The bride and groom left early Saturday morning on their honeymoon trip.

Bloodgood Worth $1,000
I had an opportunity to observe the efficiency of the Bloodhound as an instrument for tracking criminals, while I was at Wichita, said a local attorney the other day on returning from a trip to Kansas. "As long as I'm around, I've never seen anything equal to a Bloodhound. The dog is always on the scent, no matter how well the robber may try to cover his tracks."

An Atrocious Crime
An atrocious crime has just been committed in Wichita, Kansas. A man was shot down in broad daylight on the streets, and the Bloodhound was brought in to help track down the culprit. The Bloodhound ran to a stream, where it appeared to be mystified for a few minutes. It then ran into the timber with the sheriff, who was taking the Bloodhound and two men into the house and was left there. The Bloodhound then took a line for town.
