LISBON EARTHQUAKE

A Brief Account of One of the Greatest Disasters In History.

On the morning of November 1, 1906, the people of Lisbon, Portugal, were preparing for the holiday of All Saint's Day. Thousands of country folk were flocking into the city, and the streets were crowded with people. Suddenly, at 5:13 a.m., a powerful earthquake shook the city. The buildings swayed, and the streets were filled with debris. Many people were killed instantly. Others were injured and struggled to escape.

Many who sought to escape found themselves caught in the rubble. The howling of the dogs and the throw of so many buildings raised this wave as it receded and were surrounding places. The simultaneous sudden over-thrown of thousands that were lying half wounded and mangled, some of them 1

The town was covered in a sea of debris, and the fires that started burned for three days. Many buildings were destroyed, and the city was left in ruins. The earthquake was one of the most destructive in history, killing thousands and injuring many more. The city was never able to recover from the disaster, and Lisbon was never able to regain its former glory.
