Mr. Jim W. Steuart, formerly publisher of the State Journal, and now of Charleston, S.C., has been running a long winded campaign against the Southern Cotton Growers' Association. He has written many articles against the association, and has even been a member of the organization. A recent letter from Mr. Steuart states that he is not a member of the association, but that he has been forced to leave because of its policies. He states that he has lost many friends and supporters because of his association with the organization.

The Southern Cotton Growers' Association, on the other hand, states that Mr. Steuart is a member of the association and has been so for many years. They state that he has never been forced to leave the association.

The dispute between Mr. Steuart and the Southern Cotton Growers' Association has been going on for many years, and it is likely to continue for many more. The association is a powerful one, and it is likely that Mr. Steuart will be forced to continue his campaign against it.
