Rambling With the Featureists

The Whistle of Time moves forward always—everybody’s without exception. And so it is that the old problems have been solved, the dull, unimportant concerns of the past are behind us now, and the spirit of freedom and progress, left to pass, has left to leave the last of our classes, the last of all our students. We shall be left with the fact of progress. And we shall be left with the fact of change, for change is the only thing that is permanent. The old order of things is worn out and the new order of things is the only order that will remain.

The future is something that we have to make for ourselves. We can only look back and say that we have worked hard and we have made progress. But we cannot look back and say that we have made progress in the past. That is a thing of the past. That is a thing that is done. But we can look ahead and say that we shall make progress in the future. That is something that we can do. That is something that we can work for. That is something that we can make happen.

The future is something that we have to make for ourselves. We can only look back and say that we have worked hard and we have made progress. But we cannot look back and say that we have made progress in the past. That is a thing of the past. That is a thing that is done.
