Brown-Haired Elsie Scott
Chosen Freshman Queen
Blond, poised, and almost unbelievably modest—that's this year's freshman beauty queen, Elsie Scott. Selected out of a jubilant group of 31, the brown-haired, brown-eyed "pretty as pretty does" Elsie said (and meant it), "I don't feel as though I won; I don't deserve it," when inquired about her reaction to the contest. When interviewed after the contest, she said that she didn't even press her dress and rolled up her hair at 8:45. "I didn't want it. People think you get concemed, the currently declared.

15 Seniors Make Book And Key
Former Presidents Conduct Initiation
Ceremony
Fifteen seniors have received bids to Book and Key, honorary scholastic fraternity, according to Dr. Donald Martin, faculty advisor, Cloy Lavrum, incoming, and former president of the organization by virtue of her high record in the Frieslhelm scholarship, awarded to the senior with the highest average for the first year of regular work.

Those who received bids are: Emeline Boden, Margaret Dunk, Hope Fane, Margaret Gilpin, Alice Martin, Pauline Law, Alice Martin, Julia Bay Rutledge, Barbara Shirley, Josephine Whitmore, and Sally Lea Winegarden.

Ross as auditing chairman, nominated by the seniors to read the Student handbook to the seniors.

At the end of orientation week, Winthrop students were awarded bids to Book and Key society, in recognition of their standing in the institution's society, and in furtherance of the institution's high objectives. All in a nutshell, that's what the college purports to do for its students; it's another, and still better step. We're glad to play a role in this, and we can think of no better way to pay it forward.

PTO GIRLS TRAVEL TO WINTHROP FOR FIRST MEETING
The executive committee of the Winthrop chapter of the Parent Teacher organization, which recently elected Mrs. Jewel Edwards, Mrs. I. W. Smith, Mrs. H. Myrick and Miss Mary Beck to its executive board, met early last week to get the organization under way.

The organization has been formed to relieve the parents of their concern of the school and to the State.

The Johnsonian wants to give a page to the PTO chapter, and we would like to pay it forward. We would like to publicize everything that is being done, just as we publicize it in the "Johnsonian." We feel that the number of scouts to 32, which is the limit for the troop.

To accomplish this we propose to send a reporter to each meeting—a report of the meeting as a whole. We feel that the number of scouts to 32, which is the limit for the troop.

It's all right for "Johnny to Get His Gun" in a song on the 1971 Hit Parade, and as a gaudily-colored figure on a recruiting poster. That's all right, but when Johnny steps out of the song and out of the poster, that's different. It's not just Johnny then, but Bath, and Dick, and Charlie, and the ugly boy on the next block, who tripped you on your first pair of skates, and guawflwed when you experimented with your first lipstick, and stuck down his cowlick to squire you away from the new girl.

We have some idea what middle-aged senators say about conscription. They've answered the political air and issued pompous wordy statements for and against; they've tried to veer with the election-year wind, we know that. But we tend to get closer home, to find out what the girls who've datted and jiggerbated with these 1940 Johnny's think of the plan. National defense, yes; Johnny's conscription, well, maybe. So here we give you their answers to the puzzling: What do you think of the conscription of college-age boys for a military training?

Anne Williams, big sister, says that: "I have to come sooner or later, and the case won't get any better while I'm in school now or when I don't have a particularly good job will be getting good training. But I don't see why college boys have to be the ones to go from going to school or from getting a job."

Military training has a reservist at the Mathematical Department, who think they should go. If they are not in college, and that is where they should go, to get military training, provided they are given back to them. By that time, the college years will be over, and the training rendered.

Resignation, or not, would necessarily for conscription. That's the thing to do, with a clear head toward the whole thing: "I don't like the war," it seems to be a truism. The peace-time army idea is all right, but it should be prepared. Instead of facts that the way to get our boys being trained as soldiers, they are to be trained in the regular army. In 1972-73, I spent 23 months in the U.S. army, I was unprepared at the beginning of my service, and at the end of my service, I was 'dumped' in without any training at all."

Dorothy McCombs says: "Very much in favor of conscription military training, because I would like to see the young man of country - country to the front in the first place, we need a good training and in case of emergency, and this training will enable them to help train others."

"At first, we must, we must," says Barbara Howie: "If we're going to have a good national defense, I think conscription is a good idea."

Dr. Rogers, who took part in the World War of 1914, wants to avoid a draft. "I don't want to fight if they have to," he said. "I'm for our boys being trained in our own defense."

Pugh to Conduct English Laboratory
An English laboratory, conducted by Griffin Pugh, instructor in English, has been established to give assistance to students who are weak in any phase of written English. Instructors from any department may send to the English department as associate English Laboratory students whom they think need it. Inquire at the lab to see what the requirements are to send a student, with whom the students are going to be worked. At the beginning of the year the student has to give a statement of the student's facilities, and will be assigned to a laboratory student in the laboratory until she has overcome her handicap. A conference in each case can be arranged and the student given an honest evaluation.

This laboratory is the first of its kind at Winthrop. Attendance will be non-compulsory.

Dr. Gerald Langford comes to the Winthrop English department as associate professor of English, succeeding Dr. W. J. Calman. Dr. Langford, a native of North Carolina, taught at North Carolina State college last year.
